Document A

1. How does John O'Sullivan feel about the United States annexing Texas?
- He is pleased and it is time for the opposition to be quiet
2. In your own words, what does O'Sullivan mean when he says it is "our manifest destiny to overspread the continent allotted by Providence"?
- It is clear that God has given the entire continent of North America for the US to settle
3. After Texas, What is the next likely candidate for American annexation?
- California
4. What does O'Sullivan have to say about Mexico's ability to govern?
- Mexico is too stupid and tied up with its own problems to govern well.
5. What do you suppose O'Sullivan means by "the Anglo-Saxon foot"?
- It refers to the arrival and settlement of white people.
6. How can this document be used to justify America's going to war with Mexico?
- The war would help America spread democracy and "civilized" values into western lands. It would be good for the people in these areas. Also, if one did believe God had a plan for America, then war with Mexico was simply following through on God's wishes. Finally, if one believes in survival of the fittest among nations, then it might be seen as inevitable that the US would eventually control land to the Pacific.
7. How can this document be used to argue against America going to war with Mexico?
- America's war with Mexico was a form of imperialism, where the stronger just grabs from the weak. Behind this imperialism was prejudice and greed for land.
