How To Write A Good Biography

The best biographies are written for mixed reasons. They aim to inform, educate, inspire, or all of the above. They tell of the ordinary insight into the life of a remarkable person. They are the backdrop of any nation's richest history.

The Idea

- What makes your subject interesting?
- What is it about your subject that a reader would want to know?
- How can you make the story come alive?

The Research

- What was happening socially, economically and politically?
- What were the attitudes and opinions of the people around your subject?
- How might this have informed their life?

The Method

- The hard method: Using very specific questions to reveal specific answers.
- The soft method: Using open questions, allowing the story to emerge in more of the conventional way.
- The conversational method: Letting the interviewee tell the story, while revealing something unexpected.

The Process

- Creating, drafting and shaping the original body of text.
- Revising: Reorganizing and altering the text to craft a more cohesive work.
- Editing: Correcting, rephrasing and condensing the text into the best it can be.

Ready to start work on your biography yet? Are you sure to find some one with you luck. Good luck and good writing!
